Dear Readers,

Welcome to the 5th edition of the Ashtabula County Local Food Guide. We hope you are as excited about this publication as we are! Published since 2016, the Food Guide has served as a community resource to help buyers connect with farmers and to help farmers find fellow farms over the past 6 years.

Last year we took a break from publishing the guide, not for any lack of interest or effort. COVID, illness, family changes, and other life events took a toll on the volunteer team. Rather than publish an incomplete version or one too late into the season to be useful, we decided to combine 2021 and 2022 updates into what you have before you, the 5th edition.

Thank you to those who have been following our work and using this guide in your efforts to access local food. We appreciate everyone that takes the time to learn more about agriculture in Ashtabula! It is one of our greatest assets.

In this edition, you will find several changes:

- We have changed the cover! Thanks to Meghan Davis for the cover photo and all of her efforts over the years. This guide would not be what it is without her thoughtful attention to detail and willingness to labor over the layout.
- We have relocated Farm Markets to their own Retail section and have added Online options to that section as well.
- The Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) icon has been added back in as we have a farmers’ market and retail stores helping low-income individuals access healthy food.
- We have added an icon for Instagram to help you find and follow your favorite farms online.
- We have added new listings! Thanks to the tireless efforts of the team, we have added 25 new farms/producers/markets/retailers, including 15 new farms. Look for their names highlighted in green.

We hope this guide helps you appreciate the number of farms we have in this county. And we hope that this guide helps farmers see themselves as part of a larger local food community. Without them we would have no local food, and we are grateful for their efforts.

Thank you all for your support of this publication. Please share it with others to spread the word of eating local, and maybe it will help everyone find a new farm to frequent this year!

The 2021-2022 Local Food Guide Team:
    Meghan Davis      Kathy Presciano      Ann Rapose      Julie Wayman

All Ashtabula County farmers’ markets are outdoor markets promoting locally grown produce and locally made food products. Each market has its own rules about what types of vendors can participate, such as craft makers and non-profit organizations. Markets are held rain or shine but may be cancelled or closed early because of lightning, wind or drenching rain.

including a unique mobile coffee shop.

Tips for Buying at a Farmers’ Market
• Bring cash in smaller denominations. Some vendors may take credit cards or electronic payments.
• Come early. Popular items often sell out quickly.
• If you see unfamiliar produce, ask how to store, prepare, cook and eat it.
• Bring a cooler for your purchases if you won’t be returning home quickly.
• Strike up a conversation with the vendors so you get to know them, and they get to know you.

Ashtabula County Beekeepers Association
Interest in beekeeping and honey production has exploded in Ashtabula County! Many honey producers are members of the Ashtabula County Beekeepers Association, which was founded in 1889. The organization promotes the scientific study of beekeeping, pollination, honey production, marketing and disease control.

Members are active with beginning and advanced beekeeping classes, field days, monthly meetings, informative newsletters, an information table at the Ashtabula County fair, Ag Day demonstrations for first graders and more. For more information, find on the web at ashtabulacountybeekeepers.org.

Restaurants & Wineries

Many independently owned restaurants in Ashtabula county source local meat, products, and produce during the growing season. Ask your chef or server which menu items have been made with local ingredients. Creating demand gives restaurants feedback that eating locally is important to their patrons.

Ashtabula county boasts 16 wineries producing award-winning wines from the Lake Erie and Grand River Valley growing regions.

To explore local restaurants and wineries on the web, see the Ashtabula County Visitors Bureau at visitashtabulacounty.com
Community Gardens

My Neighborhood Collaborative
The mission of "My Neighborhood" is bringing people and resources together to help revitalize and rebuild a stronger neighborhood where people want to live, work, play and prosper.

As part of this mission, a large community garden is maintained by volunteers at Clifford Kadon Presidential Park at 5835 Madison Ave. in Ashtabula. The garden produces fresh vegetables available through a Farm Share (CSA) program. Full and half shares can be purchased by cash, check or Senior Farmers’ Market Nutrition Program coupons. Pricing details can be found on Facebook under the Services section. In addition, garden volunteers can use their work time in the garden to pay for weekly shares. For volunteer information, call the MNC office at 440-228-1471.

Geneva Community Garden
The garden is a partnership between the City of Geneva Sustainability Commission and the Geneva Public Library. Garden plots are located at the library, 860 Sherman Street, Geneva, OH 44041.

Plots are available for city of Geneva residents to grow their own produce. Organic gardening practices must be used, i.e., improvement of soil health and no use of harmful chemicals. Check the web for plot guidelines and applications at qrco.de/bcptwH or get paper applications at the library.

Dorset Community Food Forest Project
Join us in creating a Community Food Forest behind the Community Center in Dorset. A food forest is a forest garden that mimics nature. This type of food forest is ideal for growing large fruit and nut trees, shade-tolerant edibles, and some sun-loving food crops. Because it mimics a native forest, it requires the least maintenance, supports many native and threatened species, is ideal for producing fruits and nuts and still produces a large number of perennial and annual vegetables. Volunteers welcome

Ashtabula County Community Seed Libraries
Started locally by Stephanie Blessing of Red Beet Row and maintained by local gardening volunteers, Seed Libraries house vegetable, herb, fruit and flower seeds for public use. The aim is to help make healthy food accessible and to build up a community seed stock.

5 seed libraries are available in 2022:
Please call the library before visiting.

- Andover Public Library  440-293-6792
- Conneaut Public Library  440-593-1608
- Henderson Memorial Public Library  440-576-3761
- Kingsville Public Library  440-224-0239
- Rock Creek Public Library  440-563-3340

Anyone is welcome to take seeds out from the library and plant them at home. Seeds you don’t use, or have from other sources, can be given back to the library.

At the end of the growing season, seed collected from your plants can be donated to the library for next year. Seed-saving classes are held by Red Beet Row and the libraries.

Ashtabula County Ag Day
Where does your food come from? Each May all first graders in Ashtabula County discover the answer when they are invited to get up-close with farm animals, crops, fruits and vegetables at the county’s youth agricultural education event called Ag Day.

More than 1000 first graders learn about local food, bees & honey, milk, tomato growing, maple syrup and more from 300 volunteers of agricultural organizations.

Videos were produced when the in-person event was cancelled in 2021. View these videos at go.osu.edu/agdayonline
Rustbelt Roots
Rustbelt Roots is a northeast Ohio project working to build resilience in rustbelt communities. Local food, clean air, clean water, and disaster preparedness are the foundation of healthy and strong communities. Rustbelt Roots is a coalition of the Trillium Center, the Conneaut Arts Center, and Harbor Gardens.
Information, such as Seasonal Gardening in the Lower Great Lakes in 2022, Radical Responsible Herbalism and Storing Fresh Produce, can be downloaded from the web Find on the web at rustbeltroots.org

The Ohio State University Master Gardener Volunteers of Ashtabula County
Master Gardeners conduct a Hotline during the growing season to answer home gardening questions. For 2022 the Hotline is staffed on Monday from 9:00 am to noon and Thursday from 1:00 pm to 4:00 pm. Contact the Hotline by calling the OSU Extension office at 440-576-9008 or visiting the office at 39 Wall St. in Jefferson.

Ashtabula Grows! Gardening Classes for Food Security & Community Resilience
During the summer of 2020, gardening classes via Zoom were held to encourage growing food in our own northeast Ohio backyards with tips for staying healthy.

Classes featured presentations from local farmers and gardeners, OSU Extension Master Gardeners and local professionals. Participants, who were both beginning and seasoned gardeners, developed a sense of community through sharing of successes, group problem solving, and encouragement.

Participants now receive information on local gardening resources, share successes and failures, and continue their journey to resiliency.

To register or view previous classes, visit ashtabulalocalfood.com.

Promoting Local Food in Ashtabula County
The Ashtabula County District Library (ACDL) sponsored webinars in 2021 to promote local food. The programs were recorded and are available through ACDL’s YouTube channel:

Let’s Eat Locally Together! by Julie Wayman, Local Food Coordinator at OSU Extension, and Meghan Davis

From Pasture to Plate - Purchasing Meat Directly from Local Producers and Processors by Julie Wayman and Mandy Orahood, Ohio Farm Bureau

To find these programs, go to YouTube.com and search for Ashtabula County District Library. Click on the videos tab and look for the Let’s Eat Local Ashtabula videos.

If you have questions about this Local Food Guide, have an edit, or would like to submit an entry, please contact Julie Wayman, Local Food Coordinator at OSU Extension, at wayman.31@osu.edu or 440-576-9008.
Eat with the seasons by purchasing local food at these peak times.
